A WORTHY MAN.

A Brief Sketch of One of Mason County's Most Prominent Citizens.

It is perfectly natural for any county or community to boast of her good and worthy citizens; and, as occasions suggest themselves, to single out one of more than ordinary worth, and make him a mark of especial distinction. Such is the intent and purport of this sketch.

This good old county of Mason, the most Northern point at which the world-famed bluegrass flourishes in all its natural richness and beauty, has been productive of many men of ability—men who have won fame for themselves and have attracted the attention of the outside world to the community. Some of her sons have left the homes of their boyhood, and linked their fortunes with the people of other cities and other localities, some in other states, and have won distinguished merit for themselves in their respective callings.

Of these, of course, our people are proud; but they are prouder still of those who have been with them and of them for a generation; who have been among them at all times and under all circumstances; whose interests have been their interests, and whose aims and ambitions have been in common with theirs; who have been side by side with them in adversity and hand in hand with them in prosperity, and who have always been ready to aid any cause and help any enterprise which would advance the common welfare.

Among this class of men, who have added to our wealth and to our dignity and placed our county on a footing equal, in most respects, to all the counties in a state the peer of all the states, we know of no one who is more entitled to consideration than the gentleman that we hardly need to name. There is no one who has aided us more materially on our road to prosperity than he—aided us in his early life by an example of industry, energy and economy, and during his later years by timely advice and counsel which years of experience have made him so abundantly able to give, and the wealth which strict attention to affairs and natural business qualifications have brought him is always open in support of any deserving cause.

The features in the accompanying cut are easily recognizable to every citizen of Mason county. We do not think it an exaggeration to state that every man who has attained his majority in this county knows Colonel W. W. Baldwin, and not only in his own county but the genial Colonel known; he has hosts of friends everywhere. But here among his own people, among those who have always known him, who have tried him and never found him wanting, his good citizenship is most appreciated.

Colonel William Worsham Baldwin was born in Mason county, on what is known as Jersey Ridge, about a mile from the city of Maysville, on January 23d, 1827, and is, therefore, past sixty years of age. His families on both sides were among the pioneers of this section. His parents were Garrison and Nancy Baldwin, born respectively in King William and Prince Edward counties, Va. His mother's maiden name was Van Anderson, daughter of Worsham Anderson. His paternal grandfather was Henry Baldwin. His grandparents were early settlers in the county. Garrison Baldwin died in 1829, when W. W. was but two years old. He was one of five children, three sons and two daughters, and grew to manhood on the farm, receiving the education available in the neighborhood schools.

Born and reared on a farm, Colonel Baldwin has been, though engaged at times in other pursuits, always strictly a farmer. His capabilities as such are attested by his eminent success. The most beautifully laid out and best equipped farm in all the county is his. It is situated on the Maysville and Lexington Turnpike, just one mile and a half from Maysville, and contains 600 acres. His home is the ideal country one. All its surroundings denote the grace and hospitality characteristic of the "Old Kentucky Home." Everyone, rich or poor, black or white, may rest assured of a generous welcome.

He started in the world with but little money, but possessed of an abundance of good common sense, good health and indomitable energy he was destined to succeed.

On November 20th, 1850, he was united in marriage to Miss Martha A. Tabb of Dover, this county, whose parents, Edward and Letitia (Gill) Tabb were also among the old-time settlers, coming from Virginia and Maryland, respectively. To this union six children were born, five of whom are still living. Mrs. Baldwin is still living to enjoy the fruits of the toil in which she took so conspicuous a part.

In connection with farming, the first business he was engaged in was that of dealing in tobacco. He continued at this until 1866 when he bought the Calhoun & Atkinson Plow Works in this city. He had associated with him in this business his nephew, Charles E. Tabb, who now holds the important position of Inspector in the tobacco market of Cincinnati. The firm did a large business, enjoying an extensive Southern trade, and gave employment to several hundred men. The works burned down in 1873 and were never rebuilt.

While engaged in the manufacture of plows Colonel Baldwin, or Mr. Tabb, spent much time in New Orleans and other Southern cities, and became convinced that money could be made by purchasing mules in Kentucky and Ohio and selling them in Southern markets. They made this their business, and for many years they virtually bought all the mules in Central and Eastern Kentucky and Southern Ohio. One of them would remain in the South, while the other would stay at home, buy the stock and ship it South by steamers in immense droves.

Messrs. Baldwin & Tabb dissolved partnership, and 1884 Colonel Baldwin, with Newton Cooper, became engaged in the grain and tobacco business in the large Cooper Warehouse on Front street. For several years this firm purchased large quantities of tobacco in this and adjoining counties, several seasons making handsome profits. In this business Colonel Baldwin is still engaged to some extent.

During his long and eventful career he has engaged, at times, quite actively in politics. He has always been a Democrat, though by no means an uncompromising one. It can be said to his credit that he always stood by his friends, no matter in what political creed they believed. He was elected Sheriff of Mason county in 1858, and in 1871 he was elected a member of the General Assembly and served one term at Frankfort with much credit to himself and constituency.

He has always been considered a power in local politics and his great influence with the people was always felt at conventions and political gatherings. That influence was exerted in favor of his friends under all circumstances.

This enterprising man is also largely interested in turnpikes running out of Maysville. He practically owns the Maysville and Lexington Turnpike, the best turnpike road of its length in this or any other state. He has been for many years its Superintendent, and the splendid condition in which the road is kept is due in a great measure to his constant care and attention. He is President also of the Germantown Turnpike Company. Stock in both of these is a profitable investment to the holders.

In appearance Colonel Baldwin is a man of striking personality, of a fine physique and noble bearing. He is over six feet in height and weighs about 250 pounds. He is well preserved and bids fair to live long amid comforts which he so richly deserves. He is surrounded by all his children except two, Mrs. W. E. McCann who lives at Lexington and Mrs. F. B. Ranson whose death occurred a little over two years ago. His other children are Mrs. C. W. Cartmell and Mrs. A. C. Hespess and Messrs. W. W. Jr. and R. L. Baldwin.

Such in a brief way is an outline of the public career of one of Mason county's most prominent citizens. It has been a career business-like and triumphant, and shows the possibilities within the grasp of all the youth in this free country. His usefulness is acknowledged by all and is undiminished.

EX-CONGRESSMAN THOMAS ROBERTS is dying at his home at Elizabethtown. He has a liver disease, with other complications. He represented the Fourth Kentucky District in 1882 and 1884.

STRIKERS.

Men and Women, Shot Down by Armed Gendarmes.

Hungarian Harvest Hands Make a Demand for Higher Wages.

Being Refused They Threatened to Lay Waste Every Thing—Forty-Two Rounds Poured Into the Strikers—Twelve Killed, Many Wounded.

PESTH, July 20.—A band of 180 reapers, men and women, employed at Bar, Hungary, struck Tuesday for an increase in their wages. When their demands were refused they seized a wagon loaded with corn, declaring that that would be a fair share of the profits. The farmer who had hired the reapers, and who saw he could not prevent their taking any thing they pleased, summoned the gendarmes to restore order and get back his property. The gendarmes were soon at the scene of the disturbance, but their presence at first did not frighten the strikers, who were becoming more riotous in their demonstrations. They threatened to burn the farmer's house about his ears and to lay waste his fields if he did not comply with their demands. They even went so far as to threaten the gendarmes if they interfered.

Finally the outlook became so serious that the inspectors commanding the gendarmes saw that prompt and heroic measures must be taken if order was to be restored. He gave the command to fire to his men, and they promptly obeyed and poured a volley into the riotous reapers. In the meantime one of the strikers who was standing in a group of several others, near their inspector, drew a knife and stabbed him. The mob showed no disposition to disperse after they had been fired upon, and the gendarmes, who were armed with Mauser rifles, fired volley after volley into them until forty-two rounds were discharged. Twelve men and women were killed, and many were wounded before the mob was driven from the place.

The strikers, fortunately for themselves, were scattered about the field, and it was owing to this fact that a larger number was not killed or wounded.

Lightning Strikes a Schoolhouse.

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 20.—The colored schoolhouse in Buchhead Village was Tuesday struck by lightning. The school was filled with pupils, fifty in number, with two teachers. The whole number sat paralyzed and unable to save themselves from danger. The people rushed to the burning schoolhouse and began to drag out the pupils, the great majority of whom had been rendered unconscious by the stroke. One of the teachers, Miss Willie Butler, will die. Sidney Stanfield and Geo. Turner were killed outright. Two other pupils can not live the night through.
